Indie Film Geek Mythology Receives Approval as iPhone App

Stonehenge Productions Launches iTunes Distribution to Independent Film Makers

San Diego, CA December 15, 2009 – StonehengeProductions.com announces the launch of a new distribution channel for independent film makers around the world and simultaneously announces the approval of its first full length, independent film application, Geek Mythology, written and directed by Phil Hwang.

Historically, Indie filmmakers have had difficulty getting distribution for their films. Stonehenge Production has developed an application system that converts movies into an iPhone App, allowing full length films to be purchased and viewed by millions of iPhone users.

“We heard the frustration from film makers not being able to get distribution and saw iTunes App Store as the perfect solution.” Said Mark Smillie, Founder of StonehengeProductions.com. “iPhone Apps provide Indie film makers the perfect distribution channel for their films, while delivering Indie fans better access to a broader range of movies. Now, film makers who want to get broad distribution can work with Stonehenge Productions to build an app of their movie.”

Geek Mythology is a feature length comedy about a lonely guy who acquires a mystical statue that makes him irresistible to women but runs into trouble when his best friend's girlfriend falls for him.

" I am very excited that Geek Mythology is now available as an iPhone app." Said Phil Hwang, writer and director of the film, “Distribution is always a major obstacle for independent filmmakers. So being part of iTunes is a wonderful opportunity to get the movie seen by millions of people."

Geek Mythology is available on the iTunes App Store for $4.99, or through www.stonehengeproductions.com
